Every man I had sex with when I was 14 knew I was 14 beforehand.

LGBTQ culture has no socially imposed boundaries on it. They don't police themselves. They are too consumed with protecting their political causes and shaming rightwing bigots.

Teen sex work is the norm in LGBTQ centers.

Trans icons glamorize being prostitutes as teens and it's viewed as a rite of passage.

13 - 17 year olds are a high HIV risk group.

Progressives view children as sexual beings and independent from their parents.

This is a culture, one protected from scrutiny.

In gay male culture it's viewed as a kind of social acceptance and kindness. Older men took in teenage runaways, treating them as adults.

Many leftwing gay men recall these first encounters fondly and see themselves as welcoming the next generation in a sex positive environment.

In previous generations, when a teenage boy ventured out to cruising areas or gay bars, this was how he found himself and his new community, ostracized from normal society, they'll argue.

It's become tradition.

As leftwing progressivism has advanced, 'sex positive,' is the norm.

For queer activists, sex is an expression of resistance and social rebellion.

Leftwing psychology has fully embraced the sexual child and the autonomy of teenagers.

Gay male culture is built on youth, sex and older men as 'daddies,' to 'sons.'

Trans and drag culture have 'houses' and 'families,' with older men as 'mothers,' who take in teens in exchange for prostitution. The young boys bring in money and these houses compete against each other in drag events, etc.

It's fueled by drugs and sex work.

Many trans icons recall their time as teenage prostitutes and the men who taught them with fondness, passing on their knowledge and experience to the next generation.

All under a cultural idea that young LGBTQ kids will always be rejected at home, run away and need a new family.

If you look at Gay movies and TV shows like Queer as Folk or Pose, you see this normalized and romanticized view of teenagers as sex objects.

Pose is in 90's NYC featuring young teens who join a house and transition, competing in drag shows.

All viewed as simply being LGBTQ.

Queer as Folk featured one teenage boy leaving home to live with a man in his late 20's who used him for sex.

Another was an HIV+ teen who engaged in prostitution, with multiple other teens, outside on the street of the main character's apartment.

No adult even blinked.

This is why Gender Queer and This Book is Gay are so overtly sexual and adult.

The entire culture views children as tiny adults capable of adult sexual expression and autonomy.

It's the basis for 'queer,' sex education.

It's why youth LGBTQ culture is kink and fetish oriented.

We have to understand we are working from two very separate moral foundations here.

Leftwing LGBTQ sees nothing wrong with adults engaging in explicit sex with minors because they see it as empowering and positive.

Our worldview is simply incompatible with theirs.

I've talked about this for years.

I sought comfort and understanding from older men hoping to figure out my feelings.

They wanted sex.

I traded sex for a moment of affection in the hopes of friendship.

Yes, Parents Should Know If Their Child Is Gay

Children need their parents to put boundaries around them, boundaries LGBT activists relentlessly work to remove.

Some boys my age went to the gay bar and became part of drag culture, drugs or prostitution.

I found men online in chat rooms and found cruising areas in parks, public bathrooms and the college library.

One man told me years later he found my eagerness and youth irresistible.

It's so common, most TV shows featuring a teenage gay boy will have a scene where he meets a strange man for anonymous sex.

United States of Tara, the teen gay boys go out to a cruising spot and one has a moment of sad reflection at being used.

The OA, a teen uses Grindr.

It's not a stereotype or rightwing Christians spreading homophobic tropes.

It's part of how LGBTQ culture expresses itself.

Every LGBTQ fiction story for middle school to high school for boys is about sex.

Every education guide is about sex.

Gay porn is overwhelmingly the youngest, thinnest, smallest 18 year olds possible to resemble young teens with older men as 'daddies.'

Stepfather porn and incest porn are top searches.

Priest, teacher, doctor, coach, Mormon fantasies of adults coercing young boys into sex.

This all matters because LGBTQ activists are fighting legal wars to keep parents as far away as possible from queer education, social groups and teenage autonomy.

They are explicit in their demands teenagers be free from parental limitations.

Knowing the reality is necessary.

LGBTQ leaders, activists and lawmakers refuse to even acknowledge any of this.

They'll shout about LGBTQ youth homelessness, but do nothing about LGBTQ adults abusing teen sex workers.

They want victim politics, but only enable this toxic culture.

No California Shouldn't Decriminalize Adult Sex With 14-Year-Olds

Providing reasonable legal accommodation to this very specific and narrow experience should not be an open invitation for adults to exploit young teenagers.

LGBT Activists Shouldn't Push Grindr App Complicit In Gruesome Murder

With boys as young as 14 using Grindr without parental knowledge, encouraged by LGBT advocates, the consequences dangerous apps become even more profound.

Activists Vilify Pastor Arrested For Enacting Plot Of Celebrated Gay Movie

The left should be angry about the exploitation of all minors, regardless of whether the abuser is a Christian or part of the LGBT community.

Why would underage sex for a 17-year-old be considered a 'child bride' in one scenario and a fully consenting, sexually adventurous adult in another?

Remember, LGBTQ celebrated a romance story between a minor and adult man, which won awards.

The 'Call Me By Your Name' Celebration Is Astounding In The #MeToo Era

The film tells a generation of older men that pursuing sexual relationships with teenagers is beautiful and empowering, and perfectly acceptable.

Of course we know adult straight men glamorize teenage girls, it's part of liberal entertainment, movies, music, and of course, porn.

'Barely legal,' is popular for a reason.

The difference is straight society has infrastructure to shame this behavior and LGBTQ does not.

Read this passage from Janet Mock, trans icon who championed the Women's March, as she remembers her time as a teenage prostitute, and the men who taught her.

She and I are the same age.

janetmock.com/2014/01/30/jan...

I was 15 the first time I visited Merchant Street, what some would call “the stroll” for trans women involved in street-based sex work. At the time, I had just begun medically transitioning and it was where younger girls, like my friends and myself, would go to hang out, flirt and fool around with guys and socialize with older trans women, the legends of our community.

The majority of the women I idolized engaged in the sex trades at some time or another – some dabbled in video cam work and pornography, others chose street-based work and dancing at strip clubs (an option reserved for those most often perceived as cis). These women were the first trans women I met, and I quickly correlated trans womanhood and sex work.

I perceived the sex trades as a rite of passage, something a trans girl had to do in order to make the money necessary to support herself. I had also hands, empowered me. Watching these women every weekend gathered in sisterhood and community, I learned firsthand about body autonomy, about resilience and agency, about learning to do for yourself in a world that is hostile about your existence.

These women taught me that nothing was wrong with me or my body and that if I wanted they would show me the way, and it was this underground railroad of resources created by low-income, marginalized women, that enabled me when I was 16 to jump in a car with my first regular and choose a pathway to my survival and liberation.

Sex Workers Matter: Sharing My Own Complicated Experience

<https://janetmock.com/2014/01/30/janet-mock-sex-work-experiences/>

Parents don't know the pressure placed on their kids.

Your son can download an app, Grindr, and see men looking for anonymous sex 10 feet away, 24/7, anywhere.

All telling him he's beautiful. All ready to meet him immediately.

His queer friends are all doing the same thing.

This is what I mean by a lack of social policing and shaming.

There are no consequences, other gay men aren't standing up and protecting these kids, they aren't reporting crimes, they aren't speaking out about abuses.

It's not being gay, it's leftwing gay sex culture.

The most powerful thing the LGBTQ community could do in the name of protecting LGBTQ youth would be demanding gay men take responsibility and stop all sexual

But they won't even admit it's a problem to begin with and will simply claim its anti-LGBTQ hate.
